Cold Nights: Fast Trails : Reflections Of A Modern Dog Musher

Synopsis

From dust jacket notes: "In Cold Nights and Fast Trails Dave Olesen pays homage to the sport and art of dog sled racing. While he includes detailed description of breeding techniques, training regimens and the big races, he finds his most poetic expression covering the 'why' of dog sledding. Why people endure -40 degree weather and vicious storms. Why they train for months to prepare for the race circuit. Why they exchange 'normal' lives with well-heated homes, regular pay checks and creature comforts for a lifestyle embracing a single mindedness of purpose - a fanatical dedication to dogs and the empty spaces of the north. Olesen discovers the why and reveals it beautifully. It is more than the lure of the north. Dave has not romanticized his sport. He has experienced, though, the exhilaration and freedom of life on the trail. This is a book for everyone who loves dogs, the north and the exploration of the human spirit. Winner of the Iditarod, the world's most grueling dog sled race, Libby Riddles describes the book as 'an account of northern lifestyle to the extreme.' Dave, she adds, describes vividly the 'daily triumphs, the wild beauty, the pleasure of the motion as the dogs run side by side,' as well as the 'hardships, the weather, and the disappointments.' It is the dogs, though, that animate this book...."
